

Port Hadlock Yacht Club

Spring, 2010

Fidalgo Yacht Club
PO Box 1838
Anacortes, WA 98221

Dear Yacht Club Members:

The members of the Port Hadlock Yacht Club of Port Hadlock, Washington, USA would like to exchange Reciprocal Yacht Club status with your club. We are a very small yacht club with not a lot to offer, but we are in a beautiful, protected bay with a nice sandy public beach and county dock, and make a great overnight stop on your way north or south.

Located north of Port Ludlow and south of Port Townsend, Washington at the north end of the Port Townsend Canal and the bridge to Marrowstone Island, the Port Hadlock Yacht Club has one new reciprocal Helix anchor mooring buoy available year-round for transiting members of reciprocating clubs. The buoy is well marked and easy to locate. If the reciprocal buoy is occupied when a member comes in, there is plenty of good holding ground for anchoring, and the marina usually has space.

While we have no shore-side facility of our own, our mooring field is located adjacent to the Port Hadlock Bay Marina and the Inn at Port Hadlock in lower Hadlock Bay. Both these private businesses have expressed interest in welcoming reciprocating members to their facilities. The modern marina is first-rate, and the hotel, restaurant and art gallery are definitely worth visiting. The marina may be reached at 360-385-6368 and the Inn at 360-385-7030.

Also within walking distance of the Port Hadlock Yacht Club's reciprocal mooring buoy are the fine dining Ajax Café, Northwest School of Wooden Boat Building, QFC grocery store, Bank of America branch, gas station, laundromat and a hardware store with marine section.

We welcome your members to our club, and our members look forward to visiting your club.

Fair winds,

Jay Towne
Commodore, PHYC